

Episode 463

A Surprising Find The people in the restaurant were shocked senseless the moment they saw a genuinely menacing huge bald man flashing his karambit.

The ones who wanted to report it to the police did not have the guts to do so out of fear that the man would cut them down to pieces. But when they saw Javier being targeted by the man, they felt rather sympathetic for Javier. However, just as they were all worried about Javier, nobody expected the rather menacing looking huge bald man to get floored by Javier within seconds. They were all rendered slightly speechless, not knowing how they should react. Meanwhile, Javier took out his cell phone and called the police before carrying on drinking his soup

This soup is pretty tasty. It goes well with the bread they've got here.'

The onlookers felt sympathetic for Javier earlier, yet they were now frightened of him. Since Javier could disarm the huge bald man so quickly, even slamming him against the floor and in a lot of pain was enough for them to feel pity for the huge bald man instead. If Javier had not already called the police, they would do it but to rescue the real perpetrator instead. When Javier finished his oxtail soup, the police arrived at the scene.

After investigating the matter and looking through the surveillance recordings inside the restaurant, the police brought both Javier and the huge bald man in for investigation.

Naturally, Javier was not going to be arrested. They invited him back to cooperate with the investigation.

When they arrived there, they were both asked for their identities. Javier very honestly replied, leaving the policemen slightly stunned.

"You really are the chairman of Reivaj Group... It's unbelievable that you're such a young man."

However, what they would find even more unbelievable came afterward. The huge bald man, now sitting limply on the chair, was no ordinary man. He was a regular criminal who would travel through states to commit his crimes, including murder and arson. He had even r*ped a woman who was three months pregnant, causing both the woman and the baby to lose their lives.

In conclusion, the huge bald man was a heavily wanted criminal who would stop at absolutely nothing, deeming him as a wanted fugitive, After realizing how dangerous of a criminal they were dealing with, the police officers brought out their handcuffs and locked him up.

As dangerous as the criminal they were handcuffing may be, it was pointless to do that now. After all, the huge bald man's limb's joints were dislocated, so he could not escape even if he wanted to.

Soon, Javier was done giving his statement and left the police station, leaving the huge bald man for them to deal with.

wa

He had just gotten rid of a wanted criminal like a decent citizen, but how the law was going to deal with him was up to the authorities.

The police arranged for transport for Javier to be sent back to the restaurant, to which Javier returned to his own car after bidding the police officers goodbye.

The restaurant owner was still wondering what had happened, so he quickly stopped the police officers to find out more.

“Who out of the two of them was the criminal?”

The police officers were rendered speechless. “The one who just got into his car is the chairman of Reivaj Group, the man who owns Reivaj Hospital, so who do you think you’re calling a criminal? Careful you don’t end up being slapped with a slander charge if you make wild guesses.”

The owner of the restaurant was dumbfounded! “That young man’s the chairman of Reivaj Group? Wow!

‘He’s not just powerful financially, but he’s even great at combat, managing to disarm the menacing guy within seconds...

That afternoon, Javier stayed at home to rest before he received a phone call from the police, inviting him to the station to cooperate with their investigation.

Javier was curious what else they wanted to know since he had already told them everything.

Nonetheless, Javier rushed off to the police station like a good citizen since he had nothing much to do.

In the end, he was brought to the chief inspector’s office the moment he arrived.

“Mr. Kersey, we should already be extremely grateful to you for providing free medical treatments for the poorer people living in this city. On top of that, you were even so brave that you helped us take down a wanted criminal, cleaning up our streets to make this city a safer place to live in. We are greatly indebted to you.

“So, the mayor has decided that our station will give you the “Good Citizen Award”. We’ll also organize a conference on the third floor to announce for everyone to know just how great of a contribution you’ve made to this city!”

Javier was slightly stunned. He originally thought he was there to assist with their investigation, but he was now told that he would receive the Good Citizen Award for that matter?

Indeed, it was a means to celebrate the fact that Javier was being given such a great honor.

However, Javier still politely refused to participate in the conference despite his thanks. “Thank you for your kind offer, chief. However, it isn’t appropriate for me to participate in this conference,

Seeing that the chief was about to say something, Javier interjected and said, “Calm down and let me finish first. Being brave and helping the police is something we citizens should do, which is a very good attitude to have, so all of this isn’t much. I’m sure anyone else would have done the same.”

After giving that wonderful excuse, Javier carried on to say, “On the other hand, I’m a businessman, and this is the police station. Currently, the relationship between businessmen and the police is overly sensitive. Although there isn't anything bad going on between us, we can't guarantee that someone with ill intentions might read otherwise.

"If they were to come up with something that wouldn't be favorable to us, this thing that seems like a plus might just become a hindrance to us both!"

The chief understood where Javier was coming from, his eyes filled with praise for Javier.

Other businessmen would be rushing at the chance to gain fame, but Javier remained calm the entire time. He even chose to avoid being publicly recognized when given the opportunity, so it was no wonder the young man could achieve such great success with his business. This was something most businessmen would not have the foresight to see what would happen. Hence, Javier was not going to participate in the conference. Instead, the police would be the ones to announce that they had arrested a wanted criminal. On top of that, they would handle Javier's identity with discretion, only announcing that it was a law-abiding citizen who helped the police arrest the man.

After Javier received the Good Citizen Award, he casually said a few words and left the police station

After all, they were pretty busy people, so he was only wasting their time by staying there any longer.

There was a reason why Javier did not wish to participate in the conference. He did not wish to be too high-profile.

The more known he was to the public, the more unnecessary troubles might come after him.

Javier disliked going through such unnecessary troubles, which was why he came up with the plan to reject joining the conference.

That night, the police informed Javier that Hayden was arrested when he tried to escape.

Hayden and the huge bald man had many illegal deals from behind the scenes, including assassination, albeit it ended up in failure.

Through this, the police could also dig out Hayden's crimes regarding medical waste.

Thus, even if it was just the tip of an iceberg, the police could completely dig out all of Hayden's previous crimes.

At that moment, Hayden was completely finished. He just could not figure out why the huge bald man had failed to finish his job when he had especially gotten someone to find out that Herschel, the strong fighter, was not by Javier's side, leaving him alone in that restaurant.

However, the huge bald man had failed, even to the point where his limbs were dislocated, and he was thrown in jail, waiting to be charged for his crimes. Now that Hayden was considered to be completely finished, his other subordinates within Blissful Medical Group were without a leader, leaving the entire group in chaos. After just a few days, all relevant departments shut down the entire group's operation. This was because the group had been found to have suspicious capital flow. Aside from the group's normal profit and loss statements, there was still a large portion of medical waste,

Originally, Doug had planned to use his business strategies to attack Blissful Medical Group soon. Yet, Javier gave the police the information they needed to uproot the entire group.

“You are awesome, Mr. Kersey! This is good for us. The moment everything in Blissful Medical Group comes to light, we’ll be able to acquire them with great ease, saving us a lot of capital. Well played, Mr. Kersey!” In fact, Javier had merely been hungry for a bowl of oxtail soup that day. But, the end result turned out well since he had also received the Good Citizen Award. ‘I’m a little embarrassed about this, but that oxtail soup was money well spent!’

Still, Javier could understand what had happened. ‘Whenever someone is successful , even a single fart might cause others to think about it to a much deeper level...’